CORRECTION TO SWISS GUILD BUTCHER'S CANDELABRA

Regarding the candelabra, since obviously the Swiss guild does not understand it and is misinterpreting it completely. It is clearly not Swiss, but from Saxony, and it has no connection to butchers at all, but actually shows Saxon miners.

If we enter the German term "Bergmannsleuchter" in Google picture search, we find many smaller candlesticks with similar figures, and will see that both the huge axe (for working on support beams) as well as the wooden platter (for carrying out ore) are both signs of the Saxon miners.
