

AS OFFERED ON EBAY IN NOVEMBER 2008

You are viewing what we believe to be a very rare example of Pewter.

By English law all pewter had to be maker stamped from the year 1530.

The detail on this tankard indicates that it is indeed of English origin, however there is no maker's mark to the base, suggesting that this example dates to pre 1530.

We have dated (it) to c 1525 - the reign of King Henry VII, however this could be an earlier example.

The detail on the tankard certainly relates to this period, but if a viewer of this listing can give any additional information we would be very grateful.

Measures: Just under 5 inches in height.

Condition: No tears to the pewter. Water-tight. The handle is slightly pushed into the side of the tankard and the tankard is slightly mis-shapen at the top rim.

Happy Bidding!

Additional Information that might make the seller 'grateful'

This appeared on eBay from a regular seller. The handle is a typical James Dixon Sheffield handle from the late 1880s onwards. The style of decoration also fits from 1890. It could be made as late as 1920.

'Buyer beware' I suppose!
